

STUDY ABROAD PHOTO EXAMPLES

You don't have to look in the camera. Do your best to avoid taking pictures of yourself or others while wearing clothes with logos. UofA logos would be great!

Feature yourself and where you are.

If you do take a selfie, still try to feature the space around you.

Try turning your back to the camera, or even try glancing over your shoulder. A few hours before the sun goes down will often give you a beautiful, golden light.

If there are any strangers clearly photographed in your picture, make sure they give permission to be in your photo.

Hold the camera low and angle up to capture interesting architecture. Wear your UA colors when you can!

If you have a group of people, try taking a photo of them walking toward or away from the camera. It's a great alternative to a static posed image.

Maybe take a picture of a student, with other students in the background, but still feature where you are.

When having a new experience that is unique to the culture you are visiting, take close up pictures

Have fun and safely sit or lay down to feature your background as needed.

You don't always have to be centered in the picture, but make sure we can see more than just your head. Taking a step back from the photographer helps.

When you are trying new foods and drinks, consider photographing it in a way that shows where you are.

Take the opportunity to take a picture at meals. Capture your surroundings when you can.

When taking a picture of your food, try getting your surroundings in the picture as well.
